Katie Fredericksen believes that education is the pursuit of Truth and living that Truth. God has designed each and everyone of us with a purpose to know, love, and serve Him. Our Catholic schools should help foster a hunger for that Truth, a hunger to be disciples of Christ.

Fredericksen earned her bachelor's degree from Calumet College of St. Joseph. She started working in the School City of East Chicago with grades 6-8. In her early years as an educator, she felt the need to have God be a part of the educational process. She jumped at the opportunity to work at St. Casimir school with 6th through 8th grades in math and social studies. Always open to God's call in her life, Fredericksen took the open door to teach theology to freshmen at Bishop Noll Institute. Answering God's call again. Fredericksen is in her first year as principal of St. John the Evangelist School.

Fredericksen is married to Bob and has two children who also attend St. John the Evangelist School. She co-hosts, with Bob, a podcast about living out the faith in family. She is an active member of the church, previously running the Alpha program alongside her husband at her previous parish and gives talks and works in the prayer ministry at St. John the Evangelist Church. She is concurrently in two master programs: Master of Art of Catechetics and Evangelization and Master of Science in Educational Administration program from Franciscan University of Steubenville.
